Case Study

Forest School

Foundation

Case Study

(Once Upon a time / every Day)

Student 'A' struggled with listening and taking part within PE lessons in the am, as this would all depend on the morning the student had at home the level of engagement the student would have.

(One day)

Student 'A' started to participate in the Forest Explorers program with a small group overtime started to change their way due to the structure and routine and freedom that was set out in Forest Explorers and the values that were applied, which gave Student 'A' the chance to express themselves further in a positive way.

(Because of that)

Student 'A' is participating and fully engaged in the am PE lessons and following instructions better within the lesson.

(Because of that)

Student 'A' has had the chance to become a playground leader at lunchtimes which has given them increased self-esteem to show their skills and become further engaged in the lesson.

(Until finally)

Student 'A' was showing consistent positive behaviours in the Forest Explorer programme due to the routine and structure and the chance to express themselves, which then influenced the rest of their day being more positive showing the positive behaviours they showed within the PE lesson due to the positive reinforced messages within the lesson, which in turned allowed risk factors to decrease on Student 'A' peers to work better also within lessons without the initial interruptions.
